MIRACLE ON HUDSON RIVER

Birds bring down jet; all 155 aboard survive

NEW YORK—A US AIRWAYS PILOT crashed his disabled jetliner into the frigid Hudson River in full view of New York City skyscrapers on Thursday after a collision with a flock of birds apparently knocked out both engines.

Rescuers pulled all 155 people on board into boats in the place with a crowd of about 100 onlookers.

Flight 1549 went down minutes after takeoff from LaGuardia Airport for Charlotte, North Carolina. A former Air Force fighter pilot with 40 years of flying experience, Capt. Chesley "Sully" Sullenberger was praised for his heroism in bringing the plane down safely.

AFP, MILF hunt abductors of 3 Red Cross workers

By Julie A. Saldaña, Jeffrey M. Haines and Pia. Cecilia Rodriguez
Inquirer Manila

CAGAYAN DE ORO CITY—THE abductors of three workers of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) have fled with their captives to the town of Talipao in Sulu, Defense Secretary Gilbert Teodoro said yesterday.

The separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) also made a similar claim, saying its forces had joined the hunt for Al-Qaeda leader and his men, allegedly of the leader group Abu Sayyaf.

Teodoro told reporters during a security assessment in Marikina Oriental that troops had been sent to Talipao in an effort to free Andreas Roeder, a Swiss national who heads the Red Cross branch in Zamboanga City; Eugenio Vaghi of Italy; and Filipino engineer Jose Lancha.

He said he and other officials had asked

THE MAN BEHIND ESTRADA'S OUSTER Once mortal enemies (and before that, the best of friends), former President Estrada and former Gov. Chavit Singson shake hands and hug before a religious ceremony on the death of his mother Dolita Mary Ejercito at the Poughkeepsie Church in San Juan. Even in death, it would seem, the mother continues to look after her favorite son Joseph. He'll be laid to rest this morning at the family mausoleum in the San Juan Cemetery.

Erap: Mama could not turn her back on family 'black sheep'

A GRIEVING JOSEPH ESTRADA WAS REUNITED with his old foe, Luis "Chavit" Singson, in front of his mother's casket last night—three days after the former Davao City governor brought about his downfall eight years ago.

The former President and Singson shook hands yesterday during the Mass for Dolita's mother Maria "Dolita Mary" Ejercito, who died Tuesday afternoon.

"I'm forgiven him long ago. He's welcome to come here. I'm happy that so many people want to reconcile with us," Singson said moments before their meeting at the St. John the Baptist Parish of the Poughkeepsie Church in San Juan City.

"I told him Singson (I will not vote for you)," Maria Maria Ejercito, finally said. Dolita Mary told her son Joseph Estrada when he announced his plan

"Pagkalamayon ko sa kanya dahil sa kanya. Inabangan mo ang mga kailangan ko, nakatutuhan (I will campaign for your opponent). You'll be running against my friends—(I'm embarrassed)," said Dolita Mary.

NY court acquits 10 Pinoy nurses

By Kristine L. Alave

THE NEW YORK SUPREME court has acquitted 10 Filipino nurses from criminal charges that they endangered their patients when they resigned from their jobs in a long island nursing home in 2006, in protest against over-the-hour violations.

The case was brought against the nurses by the State's Enforcement Agency which hired them from the Philippines for a three-year working contract in the United States.

In the decision issued on Tuesday and relayed to the Justice by the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) yesterday, the court's special appellate division also stepped the prosecution of Salsola Jaramin, a nurse, whom the original suit was filed, from pursuing criminal charges against the 10 nurses and their lawyer.

The 10 nurses who were acquitted were Ellen Santos, Juli Ann Aranda, Harriet Arilla, Maria de la Cruz, Claudine Gutierrez, Jenn

THE WORLD BANK isn't turning its back on the Philippines.

The multilateral lending agency recently said it would continue to financial support the country's efforts to grow the economy despite allegations of corruption hindering the a national road program that it funded.

Published reports recently said the World Bank had blacklisted some contractors from participating in its projects after an investigation showed that these firms colluded to influence the company's officials and government employees to award it the bidding for the road project.

The bid, for the $35-million National Road 10

"The [Philippine] government and the World Bank will continue to work together to ensure the success of the road program," said the bank's country director.

Although the World Bank said it would not blacklist the firm, it is planning to suspend the firm's access to the bank's funds for the road project.

Benedictine monks in concert

IF YOU LOVE GREGGIAN chant, especially when sung by vocal monks beneath the arched glass windows of a real abbey church, then the place to be is the evening of Jan. 18 at the chapel of San Beda College.

On its 62nd foundation anniversary, the San Beda College Abbey Church of Our Lady of Mountmorris will be the venue of a special music concert celebrating the annual feast of the Holy Spirit. The musical event will also be a tribute to Our Lady of Mountmorris, the patroness of the college after whom the first abbey of the Benedictine order in the country is named.

Unified "Cantata in Remembrance of the Lord," the musical experience will be held at 8 p.m. on Jan. 18 with the High School Class of 1958 (the 20th Golden Anniversary), chaired by Paul A. Aquino, as producers.

What makes this a special concert is the participation of the Benedictine monks, who will sing traditional Gregorian chant, with Fr. Benedicto Perez, OSB, as the conductor, as their accompaniment.

The 121 Benedictine monks and the 121 Benedictine monks will make up the San Beda College Chorus. The monks will be singing from the San Beda College Chorus.

Puno on Palace run: I'll consult 'moral force,' my 'apos'

2 lawmakers say Puno 'qualified'

Pura Rodriguez. "They are representatives."

Page A1

He said he will not be content to be a relaxed, non-political pundit. "We shall do our duty in our constitutional mandate, even and above any political interests," he added.

Just the catalyst

Puno said it was enough for him to be the "catalyst" in his campaign for a "moral leader" to lead the country.

"We can do that moral leader in all these spheres of society," he said. "I don't want to be a politician. I will be happy if I am just the catalyst of this movement [because] it may not be appropriate to take the leadership role in the government among our 'apos'."

He called for a continuing "revolution" from his campaign both on and off the campaign trail.

And what would make him change his mind and lead the country from May 2015, when he runs as Chief Justice said?

"My grandchildren," he said with a smile.

Moral rewards

Puno said the leaders of the country should have "a total attitude" to act as watchdogs for the nation.

"They are to be our moral compass, they will always be called to their moral decisions but in our case, we are not leaders of the nation, we are only citizens," he said. "If not, nothing will happen."

Puno mentioned what he described as a positive episode of whistleblowing and the Church's readiness to his call for a moral force.

"And as I said, all that is necessary is for the moral force to be more visible, to be more active in playing its role in the moral battle against dishonesty and malfeasance in both the public and private sectors," Puno said.

He said he was glad that the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines and "other" leaders, including his brother, Cardinal Archbishop of Manila, had "officially" supported his call.

AT LEAST TWO CONGRESSMEN are warring on the idea of Chief Justice Pura Rodriguez leading the presidency.

Both Congressman Eusebio Rodriguez and Senator Hugo Irujo, Edsa Avenue House representatives, Puno "qualified" in the press.

But Irujo said (Davao) needed to "improve on his political record" to win mass support, and to gain "a good understanding of the economy, security, justice and order, environment, governance and education."

And Irujo said that "even as an alternative candidate, Puno still [has] a political machinery and [has] a track record."

Rodriguez, then, Puno's lawyer, who is known to be a candidate for the presidency said he was willing to give way to Puno because the latter could be "the best" to lead the country.

'Only to Puno'

In interviews with reporters and radio audience early yesterday, Irujo made it clear that he would defer only to the Chief Justice and not to any other presidential candidate.

"I am not in a position to vote for him or not, but if I will and when he decides to run, I'm willing to defer to him and only to him," Irujo said.

The senator said it was Puno's "will and decision" when asked to comment on the later's statement that politics was behind his decision. (See story on Page A1.)

He said his decision on Thursday to throw his full support behind the Chief Justice should be decided to lead the country "was not ambiguous."

Irujo denied that he was in a position to lead the country, but he said he was not a "candidate" for the presidency. "I am not a candidate for the presidency," he said. "I am only a senator."

"I can't understand. How can there be a candidate for the presidency? I am not a candidate for the presidency," he said. "I am only a senator."

On the other hand, Irujo said that he would defer to Puno's decision to lead the country, but he said he was not a "candidate" for the presidency. "I am not a candidate for the presidency," he said. "I am only a senator."

The senator said it was Puno's "will and decision" when asked to comment on the la-

ter's statement that politics was behind his decision at a moment before the filing of the certificates of candidacy. (See story on Page A1.)

Justices all-out support

At the risk of the planned impeachment of Puno, justices of the Court of Appeals and members of the Integrated Bar of the Philippines (IBP) yesterday expressed all-out support for him.

"We hereby declare our high school and full support for the honorable Chief Justice because we have him in our midst with our devotion in duty, integrity, honesty and unwavering desire to bring meaningful reforms to the justice system of the Philippines," the justices said.

even said in a resolution.

Presiding Justice Francisco Torres said he was in support of the resolution and in supporting Puno after the latter was named Supreme Court Associate Justice Diosdado Peralta.

"It is our fervent hope that the judiciary and its members, particularly the honorable Chief Justice, be able to lead the nation to allow them to discharge their sacred duty to deliver justice without fear or favor," the justices said. The IBP on the other hand, said on a half-page ad in the Inquirer that carried a statement signed by its national president Mariano Bautista and right regional governors.

"The IBP hopes that the ongoing process relating to Chief Justice Pura Rodriguez would remain just that—process," the IBP said.

Like the plague

"The man avoids politics and politics, calls him the plague and this has spread the highest court will. To those who may be tempted to support him, we must clearly say that the Chief Justice and the Supreme Court are for the nation, not for the people," the justices said. The IBP on the other hand, said on a half-page ad in the Inquirer that carried a statement signed by its national president Mariano Bautista

'Ati-Atihan': Antidote to trauma

By Hector F. Magallon
Kallio, Albion

THE LONGING of the massive flooding across Manila ago have failed to dampen the drum-beating and the melodic ruse of Ifyore in the capital town of Kallio in Albion as weekend commuters the annual Ati-Atihan festival this week.

Thousands of devotees have flocked to the week-long festival to cheer the natives and more festivity of festivals held every January in honor of the child Jesus, in the latter day, Kallio.

Benny Tinsulan, secretary of the Ati-Atihan Management Board and festival events director, said all Kallio and young women in Kallio and neighboring towns have been hooded more last month.

"Shouting banners and prayer banners have been hooded, giving meaning to a place to stay during the festival," Tinsulan said.

The first action kicked off on Sunday with street dancing, fire torch and food stalls in the Kallio and Maguigan parks, the two main venues of the event.

Highlights

High schools and colleges in Albion held the "Egghouse," a street dancing parade on Sunday along the town's main avenue. The next day, it was the turn of teachers from public schools to hold the "Infant Parade" parade.

On Wednesday, devotees from the 17 towns of the province joined the "Mugato" parade highlighted by giant puppets and figures made of paper maché.

From Jan. 14 to 18, thousands of devotees flocked to the "Palacio" or "Paseo," where those seeking cure for diseases joined a leading rite of the festival of Kallio.

A re-enactment of the "Bater de Pasa" was held on Wednesday at the Maguigan field.

The highlights of the festival started on Friday and Sunday with street dancing and merry-making.

The Ati-Atihan office cannot, the main attraction of the festival, will be held today followed by a fireworks display in the evening. On Sunday, the festival will be capped with a mass and procession of tribes and devotees.

More participants

Tinsulan said many tribes spread in his early months for the festival, people and instruments to celebrate the damage wrought by typhoon "Frank."

The typhoon, which struck on Jan. 21 last year, triggered the worst flooding in the town since 1965 among the hardest hit.

Ati-Atihan village costumes and instruments were among those damaged by floodwaters and mudslides that triggered the event for weeks.

The Tinsulan said 12 tribes joined the festival this year, more than the 28 tribes participating last year.

They are grouped in four categories: Aboriginal, Original Tribe (Gadud, Original Tribe (Big) and Modern.

Tribes under the Aboriginal category will wear costumes made of indigenous materials such as abaca fiber, shell, and feathers and leaves. Those with a maximum of 40 members will compete under the Original Tribe (Gadud) category. Those with more than 40 members in a team must of 120 members under the Original Tribe (Big) category.

The Modern category groups have contemporary costumes and props including those and cultural type designs.

Roots

There are various accounts on how the festival started. One belief is that it was first held after a power pact was reached by the Ati and the Malay settlers from Borneo who had remained in the islands after the Malay settled on Negros Island.

To celebrate the medieval peace and to show their unity, the Malays named themselves with the name "Ati" or "Ati."

Another version says the festival started in 1212 when the first wave of Malays led by 10 thousand came to the islands to the southern shore of Negros, then known as Ateneo.

The story told by them that was said to be the first time the festival was held to mark the death of the great ruler, Datu Makabuso.

The story, their families and descendants, traveled on "Paseo" (street-dancing festival) and landed on Negros Island. They organized with Ati-Atihan to celebrate the purchase of the island from the Ati to the Spaniards.

The "Bater de Pasa" was followed by a broken ceremony, said to be several days, to honor and welcome the new settlers.

In the 18th century, it is said that a Spanish priest named the festival to celebrate with the first day of the Sun. When he baptized 1,000 inhabitants of Kallio, this is why the festival is both a celebration of Christian faith and the pagan merry-making of Ateneo.

Spontaneous merry-making

From a local office, the festival has attracted both foreign and local visitors. Many other towns have been postponed after the Ati-Atihan.

The festival was chosen by the United Nations Committee on Sustainable Development for celebration in 1993.

The Kallio Ati-Atihan is known for its spontaneous merry-making and street dancing where anyone could join any of the tribes dancing to the main street of Kallio.

Tinsulan said this year's festival is more significant because Kallio residents were still coping with the aftermath of the typhoon.

"The festival is a celebration of life and faith which restores the life-giving message and the love from the destruction," said Tinsulan.

Lull in Gaza as Israel envoys consider Hamas truce offer

GAZA—ISRAEL SAID ITS GAZA offensive could be "in the final act" on Friday as it dispatched envoys to discuss truce terms after Hamas made a ceasefire offer to end three weeks of fighting that has killed more than 1,100 people.

"Hopefully we're in the final act," Prime Minister Ehud Olmert's spokesman Shai Hager said, adding that Israeli envoys are now working in Washington and Cairo on Friday could be followed by such discussions by the security cabinet.

Such discussions had to be made on Friday or Saturday, Israeli officials said, as Israeli leaders in the Gaza Strip wanted a truce offer to be made on Saturday, the day after the ceasefire offer.

The Israeli Army said that, for the first time in weeks, no rocket had landed in Israel from Gaza. It was the first time since the war began that Israel had not been hit by a rocket from Gaza.

Israel's foreign minister, Tzipi Livni, whose proposals to a Feb. 16 deadline may have been improved by the start of the truce on Friday in Washington with the outgoing administration of George W. Bush.

US Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice has said Olmert, 58, who is in Israel, is prepared to offer more than 100 million in aid to the Israeli state if it agrees to a truce.

Bush defends troubled record in farewell speech

WASHINGTON—PRESIDENT George W. Bush on Thursday defended his record as president of the United States in a farewell address to the nation.

After days of handling the presidential transition, Bush delivered a farewell address to the American people in which he sought to define a legacy.

But there can be little doubt about the results. The 42nd president of the United States has given more than 100 million Americans a sense of hope and a sense of direction.

Some of Bush's actions after the 9-11 attacks, such as the establishment of a national commission on terrorism, have been praised by many.

Farm sector growth slowed to 3.92% in '08

Gov't sees better output this year

By Rex T. Orlina

THE COUNTRY'S FARM OUTPUT GREW 3.92 PERCENT in 2008, well within the government's revised forecast of 3.8 to 4.5 percent and smaller than the 4.63-percent expansion in 2007.

Government economists released yesterday showed that all sub-sectors except for livestock expanded, though rice failed to surpass 2007 growth.

Citing the full-year report by its Bureau of Agricultural Statistics, the Department of Agriculture said (statistics registered) the fastest growth at 5.74 percent, followed by poultry at 4.71 and crops (including rice, corn, pineapple, and banana, among others) at 4.08 percent.

It said that rice and corn production continued to increase despite a decline in fertilizer usage among farmers, with last year's output reaching 55.82 million metric tons (MT) or 3.34 percent higher than the 2007 record.

Corn output rose 1.82 percent to 6.93 million MT in 2008.

Rice livestock production contracted 3.06 percent due to lower hog production.

In 2007, livestock grew 4.8 percent; poultry, 0.22 percent; crops, 5.47 percent; and livestock, 1.43 percent.

"The growth of Philippine agriculture in 2008 was slightly lower than expected, largely because of external factors that have hurt productivity not only in the country but in the rest of the world as well," Agriculture Secretary Arseno Yap said in a statement.

He said these "shocks," which largely affected poultry and crops, included the prohibitive costs of fertilizers (resulting in a 30-percent drop in fertilizer use), rapid ty-

Finance pushes higher 'sin tax' rates

By Ramon M. Domingo

THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE IS pushing for a law that would roughly double the excise tax system for alcohol and cigarettes as part of efforts to sustain improvements in tax collection.

Finance Secretary Margarito R. Trono said a 50% proposal on increasing the so-called "sin taxes" has, among similar proposed measures, the biggest revenue impact of raising between P120 billion and P150 billion in the five-year period.

Trono was among the resource persons during a joint meeting of major business organizations held yesterday at the Grand Inland Hotel in Manila City working on economic roadmap for the country in 2009.

Among the groups represented in the meeting were the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the Financial Executive Association of the Philippines, the Federation of Philippine-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, the Management Association of the Philippines, the Philippine Exporters Confederation, the Employers Confederation of the Philippines and the Philippine Businessmen's Confederation of the Philippines.

Trono and his department suggested a two-tier excise tax system in the first year of implementing an increase, which would yield additional collection of between P20 billion and P30 billion.

This would then graduate to a single rate scheme that would yield between P40 billion and P45 billion in the second year.

Additional excise tax collection would range from P40 billion to

Licaros firm gets SC nod in Palawan mine dispute

By David C. Dizon

MANILA—Licaros Mining and Development Corp., a firm owned by the former General Secretary of Congress Licario S. Sison, has secured a favorable ruling from the Court, upholding its claim for a 2,289-hectare mine in Palawan.

The resolution was issued by the court's First Division on the ruling given by the court's Second Division in the case of Licaros Mining and Development Corp. v. Secretary of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources, et al., in which the court ruled in favor of Licaros.

Licaros contended that the subject area is part of its land, and that, according to the court's ruling in 1996, these lands were previously owned by the Licaros family, who had been granted a license to explore and develop the area.

In 2005, Licaros Mining and Development Corp. filed an application for a license to explore and develop the area, which was granted by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources. However, the court ruled that the license was invalid, as the area was not part of the Licaros family's land. The court's ruling was based on the fact that the area was part of the public domain, and that the Licaros family had no right to claim it.

What it (really) means to be green

NEW IDEAS, NEW LIFE TO BEGIN again. Shaking up last time... There are those of the modern thought that come to mind when you start out in a new year. They help to look back and see what we have accomplished and failed to do as we continue to struggle and improve. Looking back to the new 12 months.

Greenhouse here, one might also say that these thoughts apply equally to the environment and how we have treated Mother Earth.

Any way there still are in energy efficiency? Greater government support has the business sector take serious initiatives to build energy-efficient projects? Or are they making false claims by marketing products to get more business?

How are nearly any progress in reducing our mounting water problem? Or are we starting out of catastrophe that are turning out to be disastrous for all the world's living organisms?

What about waste? Have we started reducing waste? Or do we continue to waste and pollute this way still to come? Can we claim that nature is back in many of our wilderness? Are they safe for swimming or for fishing?

In Manila will find as one of the most polluted cities in the world? Our New Year's Eve fireworks didn't help at all in this area, despite personal attempts by the government to ban fireworks.

Let's stop for a while and give a nod to honest evaluation. Should we get a passing or a failing grade? What would we have done better? Or do the situation help? What do we think?

Craving for many things

In today's world, we crave for many things that are supposed to make our life more comfortable. We think we should have multiple cars, appliances and information are in our homes. We claim that these are basic necessities. What we do not realize is the extent of energy consumed and its effect on the environment.

People have been bombarded with a lot of hype about green buildings and green technologies. They often read about solar panels, wind turbines, energy-saving lamps, green materials, etc. What many people don't realize is that being green is not merely installing technical gadgets into their buildings while continuing with their wasteful lifestyle.

Being green is more about adopting a green lifestyle than using green technologies.

Let me cite a few examples. What is the point of using energy-efficient lamps in our homes if we run them on even if it is not in the room? This is comparable to using air-conditioners with power saving and maintenance habits.

Even at GoGo, the former American Express building, who was an Oscar award for its documentary on climate change "The Inconvenient Truth," was highly criticized for its 28-screen movie which consumed more energy in a month than the average American household in an entire year. Talk about habits.

Another example would be to put a green building in the middle of nowhere instead of siting them away from the nearest public transportation. The latter how the place is designed, right or not, would. Some people call this urban sprawl.

Other points now are getting more people, although the price is still very cheap, to use more public transport. It is not the most people, it has generated a lot of business. Again, most people think that solar panels are installed to save money. Many projects are in, still these devices without considering the efficient design of the houses where they will be installed. Would it matter when people are installing solar panels to save money? It is better to use energy more efficiently to save money.

Adopting green lifestyle

A very good example of adopting a green lifestyle is how about the heating and cooling needs of building occupants. For emergency reasons, people are putting on extra coats during winter months, turning the thermostat down, saving energy, and the same concept, wearing light, airy clothes during hot weather. It is a good idea to use building occupants' behavior to save energy.

There are other examples that all have to do with changing our ways to a greener lifestyle. For example, using shower caps instead of bathtubs and showering the use of expensive and scarce materials such as for gardens and lawns can greatly reduce water use.

Using task lighting like table lamps instead of lighting the whole room can be a practical way to save electricity.

The best way to go green starts with the design of our homes. Considering that buildings and houses consume about 75 percent of the world's energy, it makes sense to do it right as early as possible during the design stage of the project.

The best way to go green building is its design considerations. This is really measured in your electricity bill. For those planning to build their houses and buildings this year, try to find an architect who can really evaluate your needs based on green architecture principles. A green architect will help you reduce costs through sustainable energy savings.

Mahogany Place 3 the home of your dreams

IT'S NOT SURPRISING TO SEE BUILDING projects in progress or selling their new homes and lots. But there there are now exciting housing developments in the metro for subdivisions, most developments are now going up to provide facilities from homes to schools.

One such development is the Mahogany Place 3, a subdivision development of DMCI Homes in its business district in Tagaytay that is not only providing facilities for the home and lot owners but also for the community.

"Mahogany Place 3 is the latest subdivision project in the area because the area is a development to provide facilities for the home and lot owners but also for the community."

Small community

Greenhills Heights is composed of four small residential towers. The small community will feature only 140 units. Prices range from P5.5 to P5.5 million for a one-bedroom unit (46 square meters) to P5.1 to P5.1 million (50 sq m).

"With only a few towers and only 140 units, we expect a highly-luxury community. It is a small community. Residents will want to know their neighbors very well," Almazan declared.

Megaworld upbeat, unveils Greenhills Heights

MEGAWORLD CORP. REMAINS UPBEAT with the real estate industry's prospects for this year despite the global financial crisis. At all, the company's No. 1 residential construction developer recently unveiled a small residential estate in San Juan City.

The premier, Greenhills Heights, will be the latest in the Megaworld's Greenhills Series. Megaworld recently opened the project's showroom with San Juan City Mayor IV for the launch of the project.

"Greenhills Heights is an ideal home for existing families since it is quite near the Ortigas business district and houses proximity to some of the nation's best private and secondary schools such as La Salle Greenfield, Old Mission and Xavier School," Megaworld SVP for Marketing and project head Antonio Adamson said.

RP property sector optimistic, realistic in 2009

By Thomas M. Salinger

IF THE SHEETS ARE bullish in the year of the ox, so are realtors and property developers. And as property analysts see the bright and gloomy spots, real estate players and real estate-related companies are seeing the gray areas as opportunities.

Adnan K. Wadud, president of the National Rural Extension Association, said the success of the movement, of more export-oriented development, which he described as those who have been in the business for at least 20 years and have experienced at least 3 economic "cycles" and worse than, suggest that the latest financial situation is still *Offered features as well.

He added that these experienced developers are well-honed, "have had carefully supervised (projects) focused on very specific real-world target markets."

Mabutas said the difference between the Philippines and its first world counterparts is that "we are more experimental, if not 'importers' when it comes to reform. With each state under different periods and different administrations, we have had valuable learnings that have caused reforms in our banking and economic policies."

He added that unlike "the most recent economic turmoil (in 1987) when the Philippines got the 'hit' almost the day after our neighbors had it, nothing is unexpected, since we are seeing it approaching and giving us time to prepare."

Stacy said that while he is time that adds to increasing interest. Projects have slowed down, but "real" need for housing, especially for the middle to low-end markets, is very much present.

"It is the availability of financing, for these first homebuyers that will move this market. Investors now should actually look at buying and own unimproved projects, either to flip or to have them leased in the future," he said.

Usual tendency

The usual tendency of investors is to look at prospective projects/costs from their own perspective, from their high standards, from their personal tastes. But actually, a cost

According to Mithulani, assets on market that can be considered are the foreign resources who are looking for alternative sites other than the United States and Europe. He said that Asia spreads its focus as a good choice and the relatively stable economy in the Philippines is definitely an attraction for them.

"Even Fitch's ratings show a positive and stable outlook for the Philippine economy and real estate has always been proven as the safest investment. In fact, real estate is the only instrument where there are no indicators which cannot be converted by time because of appreciation." He advises investors to "go for the end use."

But just like United Pregnancy Center's prediction that many women, particularly the low- and middle-income, that will heavily on the international market are expected to be the most severely afflicted by the global financial crisis, property players Jose Ramon Piquet II, president of EAGE Properties-Kawston Corp, has a similar outlook.

Background

Fryer said he believes that any strategy that continues to target overseas buyers would most likely fail because:

* When people have lost a significant amount of their investment, there is no further cushion, nor available funds, to use for additional purchases such as real estate.

• Most common Filipino are heavy investors in the stock market, which includes those

• Many overseas buyers have already flocked against their home equities in favour of their purchase of additional property improvements.

* Here that the value of their homes are much more than the value of their collateral has a result of the steep drop in the housing market, they are caught in a situation where they're at the risk of losing their first homes. An individual in this situation will not likely consider investing because he is faced with the more immediate need for survival.

"We believe that the overseas market is a highly speculative market, mostly buying properties with highly leveraged loan loans and so they lose money. Now that bank financing has dried up, so will sales from this particular segment," Pagan predicted.

Sanjour Cove is a high-end seaside residential community comprising 66 lots, only 30 of which will be sold, the rest being left as wide open space and common areas. Lot sizes range from 500 to 2,000 sq ft. At full development the master plan envision approximately 370 lots.

Get your prom date to say yes

To what great lengths guys and girls
go—surprise!

By Bianca Cansino
Photos by Ryan Fernandez

GOOD BOY, I SAID APPROXimately to my 15-year-old brother. It was late night, and he was hunched over a paper canon. A stack of hats, boxes of glue and colored markers were scattered all over the table.

"Do?" he asked, not looking up.
"Good boy," I repeated, looking at his brother's doing his homework.

"I'm not," he said. "This is for my friend.
He's asking me to come to the prom and watch me help."

"What are you doing, a class number?
Why do you all have matching hats?" I said to himself. "It's just a prom, not a proposal."

He shrugged, and I rolled my eyes. I was, after all, talking to someone whose dad had asked him to come through a glass handmade card. A couple of months ago, my brother must have noticed a card that contained a picture of a couple dressed in formal wear; the girl who gave it to him placed a photo of her face over the couple's body, and drew a glass question mark over the boy's. The next week, "Could this be you?"

For several days after that, my siblings and I made fun of my brother and his girl in the car. But we gradually gave up. After all, she said she didn't like the girl—selected the one—wasn't just another vague female. She was creative, and she had a plan.

Obviously, the days of imaginative proms are over. No one is satisfied with mere high school proms; nowadays, proms and graduation balls have to have a theme. Greek gods and goddesses, Hollywood night—everyone has to make each other in the prom, and it seems to have carried over to pre-prom activities, like making one dress.

Buyer's imagination for one message: If you want to make the most of your promotional dress, it's time to try during proms. You don't have to blow a lot of cash—all it takes is time and a little ingenuity.

Play games—literally

Grab some of your friends (including future prom date) to play party games such as Scrabble, Trivial Pursuit or Clueless. If you're playing Scrabble, spell out the word in the board ("I'm with you in the prom and I'll be your lifetime love") should do.

If you're playing Trivial Pursuit, pretend you have the "prom" card and start giving clues—if the girl is, for the question. If you're playing Clueless, make dancing moves and point to her.
Then you, notice that we're looking this up in high school boys will find this cute and will probably be your date to get the first to the first place.

get injury and, statistically, when that happens, I just make a negative mental note of it. Because I believe that awards should be given out for excellent work, not for surviving. FR. (crying)

Also watch out for awards that purport to honor "best of the year" achievements, but don't actually vote or listen to all of the work in the field being covered.

The best way to protect yourself against compromised security is to realize that a number of months (some days) are saved, for example, if you cannot or refuse to use any type of choiceless or reduction artists' work first.

What if we don't find conflicts about one ability to enhance superior work? We just have to enhance the different social competencies themselves, and come up with a vigorously abridged list of the behaviors that are reliable, and easy to measure.

Jolie triumphs in Eastwood's missing-child drama

JOLIE. Here about her well-timed performance.

By Lisa F. Kelle

"Changeling"
In Clint Eastwood
In: Angeles, Jolie

AS AN ACTRESS, ANGELINA Jolie has been awarded for playing war-torn, vice-to-life characters and distressed women, from "George Wallace" and "Girl in the Rain" to "Hush" and "The Blood of Others."

Lately, Jolie has been shining in her most crowd-pleasing, emotional projects ("Warrior," "Young Tom Brakes").

"Mr. and Mrs. Smith" and otherwise in writer like Michael Haneke's award-winning 2007 drama, "The Changeling" (in which she played Marion Ford), the wife of slain FBI agent James Ford, who is now in prison.

Fruitless search

In Clint Eastwood's period drama, "The Changeling," the actress is awarded for well-timed performance in a night to behold the play. Christine Collins, a single mother in 1920s Los Angeles, whose search for the missing son, who is now in prison, is a story of a woman's search for her son.

search, the LAPD announced that Collins' son had finally been found in Illinois, some 3,700 kilometers from California.

This emotional crime-solving "changeling" of the emboldened police department had no on-screen glitches, however. Christine Collins was played by Jolie's teacher and Christine Collins who the same day was in the same line as the same day.

To add to the story, Christine Collins was killed off by the police in a previous movie after she refused to recognize the boy as her son. Christine, in a dramatic search, a detective had accidentally revealed upon a man given that one could find a body part of 20 young boys. The crime: Gordon Norbert (the chillingly named Anton Boller, played by Jolie's teacher, a remorseless pedophile and serial killer in the mind of Jeffrey Tambor).

Eastwood has been an Oscar winner since his "Unforgotten" film in 1993. "White House, Black House"—some 10 years after he played his dramatic debut, "Play Misty for Me" (1971), at age 40. He doesn't possess the cerebral ardor of

Pinko-flavored world music in Makiling's latest album

By Michael Torre

IT'S BEEN OVER A DECADE SINCE Makiling's Kimberly Llanera at the Makiling (Llanera) made its debut in the local music scene, standing out from the crowd with its distinctive Pinko-flavored brand of world music. Blending influences from all over the globe, the Pinko band caught attention when they were still in their late teens and have continued to evolve a long and fruitful career.

Not easy to label

Makiling's Kimberly Llanera is a multi-talented musician, singer, and songwriter. She has released two solo albums, "Pinko" (2004) and "Pinko" (2006), and has collaborated with other artists like the Pinko band, the Pinko band, and the Pinko band.

MAKILING. Their sound has elements from disparate genres.

easy to label. Blending seamlessly from reality to fantasy to folk, their music is a blend of many genres, from rock, jazz, and reggae to folk, Latin and soul, and world music.

Listen to Makiling's latest album, "Makiling" (2008), and you'll understand why the band continues to engage a wide range of audiences. They may have a background of folk, jazz, and reggae, but they don't stop there, but their compositions show a unique mix of influences and styles. They are not just a band, they are a group of people who are passionate about their music and their art.
